

Bring ideas to life
VIA University College

Co-created education

Why on earth co-creating?

3 points from the video:

- Practise- not prepare- meaning, be open, be in a creative «mood»
- Build on each other- creativity and energy
- Try new paths, do not be stagnant!

You are not an island!

- A way of understanding learning (ref. What Paul and Sidse have talked about)
- A way of learning more
- Understanding your own learning- you can be conscious of the process.

- Now – Lave and Wenger- helping us to understand.

Communities of Practice

- Learning is not you one a small island- it is an integrated part of practice in a context.
- The group or communities define themselves through the doing or activity of the participants
 - how the members develop knowledge
 - the mutual understanding of the community's practice

Learning is not an isolated phenomena, but embedded in sociocultural cultures and practices. Through the mutual engagement, relationships tie the members together and learning occurs. The practices which is making up the community might be formalised as well as being informal. However, wherever we are we are partakers, to different degrees, in different communities, that is- in the family, in the neighbourhood, at work, in sports, with friends and so on.

Jean Lave and Etienne Wenger (2003).

Describing the learning process

- Peripheral participation- the newcomer's way to becoming an expert
- Through the attainment of knowledge and through the practice in the community the members move towards the core with the goal of full participation.
- Examples: becoming a pupil, getting a new job, playing an instrument, becoming a carpenter

For this project:

- Master or bachelor education
- Part of the group from either Norway, UK or Denmark
- Part of the research team
- Part of MaCE

What can you benefit from being in this project

- Being part of a community of learning
- Being a part of a community with other students with the same purpose
- Being part of a research environment

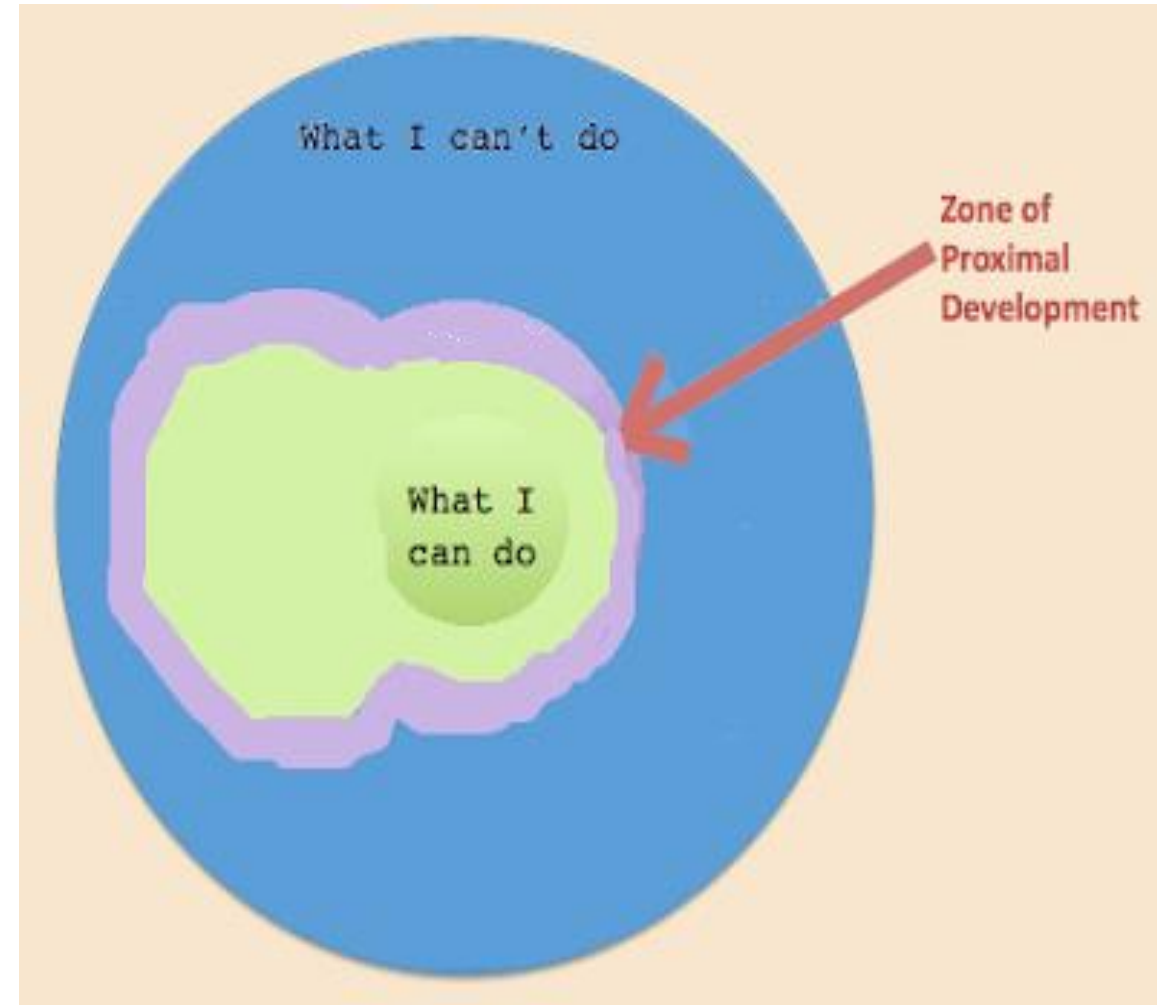

The green and purple part illustrates what your possibilities for learning is.

So write on the padlet- how can you help each other when it comes to f.ex.:

- language
- understanding theory
- interviewing
- writing the thesis
- etc.

NB! Remember to write you name!

https://padlet.com/mette_bunting/co_creating

Whiteboard

- Write what you think about the session
 - What has been good
 - What can be better
 - Other aspects.